

Teaching and learning about climate change will recognize and support the emotional and other impacts of climate change on students.

Provide opportunities for students to probe the underlying causes of the climate crisis and the structural racism embedded in climate change with disproportionate burdens and negative impacts on people of color and to understand the dynamic nature of complex systems and how they change, and opportunities for them to practice using systems thinking to inform their choices.